Article
Nikita Savchenko · May 9, 2016 1m read

After publishing a saved draft, the post date should be the date of publishing

Hello developer community developers!

Thanks for all of features you create.

I encourage the one simple issue again and again when posting articles. Would be happy if it get fixed.

When publishing an article draft, the date of the post should be the date of publishing, but not the date when the draft was created.

When the post is created and saved as a draft it usually takes some time to actually finish the post and publish it. In my case, it took 3 days. And when I finally publish the article, it is displayed below any other posts created by this time on the homepage, until I comment this article for example.

Please let me know what do you think.

Thanks!

#DC Feedback

Source
URL:https://community.intersystems.com/post/after-publishing-saved-draft-post-date-should-be-date-publishing