How to Become a Helpful Member of Developer Community

Hi Developers!

Recently we are getting a lot of requests on how to become an active and helpful member of the InterSystems Developer Community.

The terms are very simple:

1. Answer questions

we have a lot of unanswered questions, and questions without an accepted answer. You are very welcome to share your knowledge and help other members of the community.

2. Contribute articles

Write articles that describe your experience with InterSystems technology: your solution, your know-how on development, tips and tricks on debugging, deployment, and other approaches in robust development.

There are a lot of examples of articles that became very helpful to the community.

Or translate articles to other languages on regional communities.

3. Contribute Open Exchange applications

Share your libraries, solutions, and tools on Open Exchange - via Github, Gitlab, or any other public repositories.

Please don't hesitate to ask your questions in this post and let's discuss how to make this community more and more helpful for engineers working with InterSystems technology all over the world.
